Producing the CCC Book and Internet edition was a valuable experience and it marked the end of the international CZM-Centre (1993 – 2006) era.

Just at the last moment, in 2006, Richard Jorissen, Director of the National Institute of Coastal and Marine Management - RIKZ/Rijkswaterstaat/Ministry of Transport, Public Works and Water Management (I&E), The Hague, trusted this production to me as an 'Exit Strategy'!

Marcel Stive, Professor Delft University of Technology, deserves much thanks for his contributions to and timely support of the CCC production.

The financial support of the Ministry of Infrastructure and Environment (former Ministry of Transport, Public Works and Water Management) and of the Delft University of Technology is very much appreciated.

Writing together with 100 authors is fun. It took, however, more time than anticipated in the beginning. ...it was good that I was pensioned. I would like to thank all the 100 authors for their active participation and the time spent for this endeavour. I hope that this collaborative production will contribute to increased communication in the planning and implementation of coastal sustainable development programmes.

Special thanks are due for the warm hearted hospitality received during the numerous missions to the participating coastal countries.

Especially during the last two years of the production, I was totally absorbed and realised that I should have spent more time with my dear wife Fanny, who happily enough continued to care about me. I am very grateful for her understanding and I will make it up to her in the near future!

And that promise holds also for my children and my beloved grandchildren. I always wonder at a strange coincidence: the day my granddaughter was born together with 350,000 other new-borns on this world, 220,000 persons drowned in the 26th of December 2004 Tsunami waves.

Ir. A.B.M. (Seen) van der Plas, former Permanent Secretary of the Ministry I&E, has stood near me during the last years, provided me with much appreciated advices and stimulated the process in a realistic way.

Hugo Niesing, liaised between me, Rijkswaterstaat and the publisher in a very effective way. In critical moments, and there were some, he found innovative and much appreciated solutions to move forwards.

The relentless efforts of Moniek Loffler, structuring and editing the first drafts into readable chapters in a meticulous way, are highly esteemed.

Gerrit Baarse contributed to the concluding and synthesising chapters, overlooking the fields of action and highlighting the essentials, leading to a call for recommendations; thank you so much.

Pat Doody took the task of English correction and editing of all the contributions of the Book and Internet publication very seriously. Thank you Pat for all your efforts, which were more than anticipated.

Eli Birnbaum, Lisette van Hulst and Alan Pickaver: your help with the English translation and correction of bits and pieces, in the beginning, in between and at short notice, was appreciated.

EUCC, dauntlessly directed by Albert Salman, took on the task of publishing the CCC Book and the Internet edition, in a not so simple setting. Thank you Albert and the four Ma's: Malou Alkemade, Maria Ferreira, Marjolein de Lange, and Marijke Kooijman for executing this challenge in such a positive way.

Rob Bijnsdorp, is due thanks for facilitating the very start of the CCC production process.

Rob Leewis, having written and produced many books during the last years, is thanked for his valuable advices in a period I needed them dearly.

Nico Bakker, Dutch Ministries of I&E and Foreign Affairs, is gratefully acknowledged for his enthusiastic support during the execution of water and coastal programmes in India and Vietnam.

René van der Plas, Port of Rotterdam, deserves thanks for his remarks improving the Rotterdam chapter.

I would like to thank all my colleagues of the CZM-Centre and the RIKZ, with whom I worked together with much pleasure for so many years in a fascinating fields of applied coastal research and policy preparation. I would like to mention just a few: Jan Al, Job Dronkers, Tjark van Heuvel, Niels Roode, Joost Stronkhorst, Jan Visser, Kees Wulffraat, thank you for the supporting and encouraging words.

Luitzen Bijlsma, former RIKZ Director, founding father of the CZM-Centre and Lead Author of the IPPC-Chapter on Coasts (1995) enthusiastically supported the applications of ICZM programmes in vulnerable low-lying coastal countries around the world. Thanks for his support of this CCC publication.

Jo-Ann Snel, you have a very special feeling for book and internet lay-out. It is fascinating to see you meticulously and precisely working and moreover to see the wonderful, balanced results. Thank you for the lay-out of the CCC Book.

Harry van Reeken, Peter van Elk and Andre Akkerman, colleagues for more than a quarter of century, thank you for all the efforts to refit the illustrations, for the sharp observations and remarks regarding the lay-out of the book and the illustrations, helping to make the many different constituents to a book.

Andre Akkerman designed, a long time ago, the logo of the World Coastal Conference -1993 symbolising the integration of interacting spheres embracing mother Earth. After the WCC we continued to use 'your' logo as the CZM-Centre logo.

Andre unfortunately passed away at a young age in August 2010.

We appreciated his artistic and enthusiastic input, and hope that his valuable contribution, together with all others, will lead to a more sustainable, long term approach to coastal zones around the world.
